

Waiting for Numbers: Where to Find Green Vote Totals in Michigan

John Anthony La Pietra . . . 2020-11-03

Some quick hints for anyone who wants to find out the results for the 30 Green Party candidates on Michigan's ballot this year.

The big official page for Federal and state races is this one by the Bureau of Elections:

https://mielections.us/election/results/2020GEN_CENR.html

Unfortunately, it may be very slow to update. In past years, the equivalent Webpage has typically waited to include a county's figures for a given race until the county is done counting that race. News media may update much faster, giving us "the latest figures with XY % of precincts reporting" -- but of course they're not official, and they too have to rely on the ultimate source of vote counts: county (and local) clerks.

This Webpage:

https://www.michigan.gov/sos/0,4670,7-127-1633_8716-31514--,00.html

contains the Bureau of Elections list of links to county-clerk Websites, or sometimes directly to county-level election results. Another list of links belongs to the Michigan Association of County Clerks:

<http://michigancountyclerks.us/resources/>

Now, if you want to know which GPML nominees are on the ballot in a given county, see:

https://www.migreenparty.org/Files_ElectionsCoordinator/Public/on-ballot-in-which-counties200911.pdf

That list may lead you to focus on counties with the most Green candidates running -- or counties where Greens are running for offices only voters in those counties get to elect. Here are possible links to results in some of those counties -- with the names of "in-county" candidates for each.
